

Volumen 4, Número 1 Enero a Julio 2021 Revista Semestral. Venezuela

Especialista Lelis Rondón

Rómulo Gallegos National Experimental University of the Central Plains (Venezuela)

Email: rondon.lelis@gmail.com

How to cite this article: Lelis Rondón (2021), "The Doing of Community Service in The Social Ethics Training of Students in the University Sector." I (1-16)

Received: November 2020

Revised: November 2020

Accepted: December 2020

The Doing of Community Service in The Social Ethics Training of Students in the University Sector.

ABSTRACT

Community service is the activity that university education students who are studying professional training must develop in the communities, applying the scientific, cultural, sports and humanistic knowledge acquired during their academic training, for the benefit of the community, to cooperate with their participation in the fulfillment of social welfare goals. In this particular, the purpose of the research is to analyze community service and its implication in the formation of social ethics in university students. The general objective of this research is to analyze the doing of community service in the formation of social ethics in students of the university sector, under the Documentary type research modality, descriptive level, using a bibliographic design, which will allow collecting information corresponding to the theory and proposal that the different authors have on the topics addressed. The method used in the research was the Analytical method because it conducts the investigative process separating or discerning the elements or characters respectively of a whole following logical orderings. As a result of the research, it is intended to clarify and understand the meaning given by the individual, who is in the process of professional academic training and consolidation of his personality referred to the respect value, importing for his understanding not only the determinant of the concept, but the message, posture, activities, gestures and all the meta communicator implicit in its representation in an attitude. It is necessary to emphasize that it can be shown that in an attitude towards knowledge and the way in which one learns to build from the university reality, interesting the human of its meaning in community academic interactions.

Descriptors: Community service, social ethics, university sector

Biographical Review: Economist, Lawyer, Specialist in University Teaching and currently an ordinary teacher dedicated exclusively to the Instructor ranking of the Popular Law subject at UNERG.