

MSc. María Mercedes Anzola

Experimental National University from Western Plains Ezequiel Zamora. Venezuela

Email: mariamercedesanzola@gmail.com Orcid code: <https://orcid.org/0000-0001-9266-3095>

How to cite this article María Mercedes Anzola (2023), "An Ex-Convict Labor Insertion Analysis" (1-13)

Received: 19/08/2022 Revised: 19/08/2022 Accepted: 20/09/2022

An Ex-Convict Labor Insertion Analysis

ABSTRACT

From social sciences, penitentiary measures ask to repressive action from government, forehead anti-social behavior, with public powers participation, to finish the Penitentiary System intervention, due has a fundamental role as the re-socialization, in that sense, the purpose from this essay, is to produce an ex-convict labor insertion analysis, landscaped trough Luhmann's (1987) Social Systems Theory, Wright, Cullen and Miller's (2001) Social Support Theory, and Hanz's Transgression of Law Theory, supported on Bolivarian Venezuelan Republic Constitution legal frame, Penitentiary Organic Code (2015) and Human Rights Universal Declaration (1948), produced as an documental research, from content analysis Hostil's (1969) revealing, as a technique which produce inferences that systematic and objective identify text specific characteristics, so results revealed an ex-convict labor insertion change the order parental links and help social inclusion and re-socialization, that's for it conclude an ex-convict labor insertion, is sustainable by the parental links and in some of government planes from Penitentiary System Popular Power Ministry, that contribute a high grade of re-socialization through a occupation domain.

Descriptors: Human Rights , Convict, , Work, Re-socialization, Inclusion, Parental Links

Biographical Review: Venezuelan, Social Sciences Doctoral Student, National Experimental Occidental Plains Ezequiel Zamora (UNELLEZ-Apure), Magister Scientarium Right Penalty and Criminology Aragua's Bicentenary University (UBA), Degree as Lawyer in Saint Maria University in praxis..