

Esp. Frank Márquez

University Bolivariana de Venezuela (Aragua – Venezuela)

Email: frankmarquez440@gmail.com

ORCID code: <https://orcid.org/009-004-3473-8262>

How to cite this article: “Frank Márquez. Community Organization Strategy With Social Participation in the Supply of Drinking Water in the Pica Palo Negro Sector, Aragua State”. (2024), (1,14)

Received: 20/01/2022 Revised: 25/01/2024 Accepted: 29/01/2024

Community Organization Strategy With Social Participation in the Supply of Drinking Water in the Pica Palo Negro Sector, Aragua State.

ABSTRACT

In these times of modernity, public services have become the fundamental factor of humanity, the concentration of the population in large cities caused imbalance in some sectors, this is what is referred to with the water service in the population of La Pica. In Palo Negro, Aragua state, today it is without the vital liquid for its consumption, this resulted in physical wear, stress, fatigue of its inhabitants, especially the elderly, to obtain the desired liquid in sectors where the service Public works 24 hours a day, the route is long distances, passing through one of the most frequented highways in the area, its general objective is to develop a community organization strategy with social participation for the water supply in the sector. Pica, Palo Negro, Aragua state. In this sense, theories about community development are assumed by Rezsohazy, 1988, community organization by González, 1994, popular power by Dorta, 2017 and social participation by Dávalos, 1997. Evidently with a socio-critical paradigm by Arnal, 1992, hence assuming a qualitative methodology with techniques such as survey, observation, that is why the results were accurate through community organization, managing to solve the problem of water supply in the sector. In conclusion, the importance of social participation within community development brings positive changes, overcoming community problems under good community organization.

Keywords: Community Development, Organization, Participation, Community, Popular Power.

Biographical Summary: Professor at the Bolivarian University of Venezuela, in the area of Production and Recreation of Knowledge, Professor of Research Methodology, Specialization in University Teaching and Judicial Management, Doctorate of Sciences for Strategic Development in Public Management.